Fire Near Town

Fire on Monday night last destroyed the stable on the Bilean farm, on the Baseline, east of Stony. The place was being burned by Mr. Fred Harris. Four horses, three sets of harness, ten tons of timothy hay and 73 chickens were burned. The fire was discovered by Mr. Bilean, but it was too late to make an effort to save anything.

Throw Away The Crutches

On the eve of the presentation of the Budget at Ottawa each year the press of the country, and notably in the manufacturing cities of the East, is filled with predictions of dire disaster that will overtake the country if there is any lowering in Customs duties through which protection is afforded certain industries. This year was no exception to the rule, the manufacturers of agricultural implements and machinery being the most outspoken.

While it is only human nature that these manufacturers should fight to the last ditch to retain any and all advantages they enjoy, and which are calculated to add to the value of their plants and increase their profits, and admitting that they are only doing what any other class would do, it is in the national interest that such claims as are advanced by them should be fully examined in the light of actual facts.

In a recent article in this column figures were given showing that in 1923 Canada imported coal from the United States to a value of over $100,000,000, and iron and iron products to a value of $122,354,000, both largely imported by manufacturers, whereas during the same period the value of agricultural implements and machinery imported from across the line only amounted to $11,721,456.

The manufacturers feel aggrieved because of these $11,721,456 of importations and contend that if the tariff was only made high enough these goods would be shut out and replaced by Canadian-made articles. They blame the inadequacy of the tariff from their standpoint for this loss of business.

It is interesting, therefore, to note that in this same year Canada exported farm implements and machinery to a value of $2,187,431. The Canadian manufacturers were able to sell to this extent in foreign markets in which they were not protected by tariffs, but in spite of tariffs levied against them and in open competition with the whole world including the United States.

In other words, Canada's exports of farm implements and machinery from the United States were only $2,324,344 in excess of exports, which goes to show that the Canadian manufacturer of these implements has nothing to complain of.

However, if these manufacturers have good reason to complain, as they claim they have, then what is to be paid for the farmers of Canada in the light of the following figures? Imports of agricultural and vegetable products for the twelve months ended February last amounted to $145,511,658 and of animal products $14,537,012, a total of $160,048,670. Why should the farmers of Canada make the importation of these farm products prohibitive, thereby securing the whole Canadian market to themselves even though by so doing the cost of living for every artisan and laborer in the Dominion was substantially increased?

But what would the manufacturer say to such a policy which would compel him to further increase the already high wages he is obliged to pay his employees?

The Canadian farmer, however, makes no such demand. All he asks is a free field, a free outlet, and no favors. He is prepared to face the competition of the whole world, relying on his own industry and the fertility of Canada's soil to win out. He is asking for no artificial props to hold him up, but he does ask that the restraints, the handicaps, the shackles now imposed upon him be removed. With these out of the way he has no fear for his own future nor for the future of Canada.

Why should the Canadian manufacturer be as self-reliant as the Canadian farmer? Can he not, through the exercise of his own energy and initiative, the skill of Canadian artisans and workmen whose verities are so much in demand in the United States, and the great wealth of Canada's natural resources lying right at his door and only awaiting development, succeed equally as well in capturing his fair share, not only of the domestic trade of Canada, but of the trade of the entire world?

Of course the manufacturers could do it if they only would. The trouble with them is that they have so long relied upon crutches provided for them by the tariff that they are afraid to put their feet squarely on solid ground. They prefer to remain feeble cripples, and the very crutches upon which they rely for support are having the effect of making cripples of everybody else and rendering Canada weak and impotent where this Dominion should be sturdy and strong. We continue as a country to limp along, when we should not merely be walking but rapidly running at the head of the race.

"Tired and Worried Nervous and Despondent"

Mrs. M. Chasler, Belle River, Ont., writes:

"For eight years I suffered from depression and nervousness.

Sometimes I could not sleep at night for worrying and the next day I would be so tired that my work was a burden to me. I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and now I am now entirely relieved of the nervousness from which I used to suffer, and things do not worry me as they used to.

"Dr. Chase's Compound also relieved me of attacks on my arms, which had bothered me for three years. My heart is never with me Dr. Chase's Medicine."

Municipal Hospitals

Small Hospitals in Alberta Operated At a Low Average Cost

During the past four years, according to figures prepared by A. E. Wharton, superintendent of hospitals for Alberta, the rural municipal hospital system has cared for a total of 21,142 patients, at the low average cost per case of approximately $13, based on operating costs. The period covered is from 1919 to 1922 inclusive.

During the four years mentioned the rural municipal hospitals of the province of Alberta system not only cared for the total of patients as stated, but also provided, in addition to the ordinary hospital services, a total of 1,470 major operations and 2,123 minor operations, and had a total of 3,313 maternity cases. In 1922 there were but 4 hospitals operating with a total of 100 beds. Today there are 16 hospitals with a total of 277 beds.

In 1923, the rural hospitals were operated at the low average cost per patient per day of $12.12, being the cost based on a total of 47,941 hospital days, with a total operating expenditure of $581,417.24. In Drumheller Hospital, which had the largest number of patient days, the operating cost was as low as $232 per patient day. It is expected that at least five new hospital districts will be put into operation during the coming year. Some of these are expected to come into operation within the next few months.

PAINFUL SCIATICA AND NEURALGIA

Caused by Starved Nerves Due to Weak, Watery Blood

People think of sciatica as a pain in the head or face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve of the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the pain and the nature of the disease is the same, and the remedy to be effective, must be the same. The pain, whether it takes the form of sciatica or whether it affects the face and head, is caused by starved nerves. The blood, which normally carries nourishment to the nerves, for some reason no longer does so and the extraordinary pain you feel is the cry of the starved nerves for food. The reason why the blood fails to properly nourish the nerves is usually because the blood itself is weak and thin.

When you build up the impoverished blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, you are attacking sciatica, neuralgia and kindred diseases at the root. As proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind we give the statement of Mrs. Marion Bell, Port Hope, Ont., who says: "Some years ago I was attacked with sciatica in my leg and hip. The pain was excruciating and finally I was forced to go to bed. Apparently all the doctor could do was to give me drugs to dull the pain, so otherwise I found no relief. I had been in bed with the trouble for eight weeks when a lady who came to see me said that she had had a similar attack, and had only found relief through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided at once to try this medicine, and before I had taken more than three boxes I found relief. I continued the use of the pills and under the treatment the pain left me. I was able to walk again, and have not since had the least return of the trouble. I feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been of such great benefit to me that I strongly urge similar sufferers to give them a fair trial."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Classification Of Western Lands To Obtain Information Regarding Areas Suitable For Settlement

During the past few years, and particularly during the past twelve months, there have come from many quarters suggestions and requests for the classification of the lands in the prairie provinces. The object of those who urged this work was that each acre of land might be devoted to its highest use, viewed from a national and economic standpoint. The land is the basic natural resource of the country, and the Department of the Interior has to some time been aware of the importance of its classification, and at the close of the war assigned to the Topographical Survey of Canada, a portion of the staff of which had been given special training, the duty of making such a painstaking survey of unoccupied lands. In order that the results might be of more immediate benefit, the district chiefs for irrigation were within easy access of the railways.

The object of these land classification surveys is two-fold. On the one hand it is to provide government officials with accurate information of what lands are suitable for settlement; in order that incoming settlers may be intelligently directed to land where they have a reasonable chance of making a comfortable living. On the other hand there is much land not suitable for agricultural purposes but which should be reserved for forestry, park, or grazing purposes. When settlers are allowed to locate on these lands, failure, as has been proved in all parts of the continent, is the result, and the whole district is adversely affected, but if properly withheld they become an asset to the district.

The surveys have accordingly been divided into two classes, those of areas where the lands are essentially agricultural, and those of lands comprised within or to the immediate vicinity of forest reserves or proposed forest reserves. The unit of investigation is in both cases the quarter-section and the information obtained is made available for government officials and the general public by means of maps, plans, photographs and reports.

The work in the field consists of making a personal examination of every quarter-section and from the information gained thereby for classifying it in accordance with its present or its potential value for settlement. Three main subdivisions are made on the following basis:

1. Quarter-sections with good soil and suitable surface for the first requisite.
2. Quarter-sections which are not suitable for immediate settlement in that there are at least thirty acres clear with the remainder very close.
3. Covered by small timber which can be cleared economically.
4. Covered with heavy timber and requiring extensive improvements.
5. Quarter-sections which when cleared will not be first-class farms, but will offer advantages in certain classes of farms or will serve for certain purposes.
6. Quarter-sections not suited for farming but which should be reserved either for grazing or forestry purposes.

During the survey the character of the soil is noted and frequent samples are taken for more precise determination at the Soil Laboratory maintained by the Survey at Saskatoon in co-operation with the University of Saskatchewan. In addition information is recorded and reported on with respect to the forest cover, the water supply and drainage, the climatic conditions, the existing routes of travel and the condition, the progress of settlement and improvement already made in the district, the marketing points, the schools, churches and municipal improvements already existing. In short, complete information about the local conditions is gathered for the use of intending settlers.

A classification map and a soil map of each area are published for free distribution and may be obtained at the Dominion Lands Office in the district or from Ottawa. In addition plans are prepared for the township concerned showing the topography, soil, forest, water, roads, cultivated areas, houses, schools, post offices, etc. These township plans are not prepared for general distribution but copies are supplied to the Agent or Dominion Lands in whose district the lands are situated. Any person wishing information about the latter may investigate at the Dominion Lands Office these plans and the detailed report of the surveyor who made the classification. Any of this information will be furnished to the public from Ottawa, but in the case of the related topographical township plans it has been found necessary to charge a small fee.

Up to the present time the staff of the Topographical Survey of Canada has classified in the manner herein described about 23,421,990 acres of ordinary lands and about 2,432,960 acres of lands in or immediately adjoining forest reserves, and the examination is proceeding at the rate of about 1,000,000 acres per year divided between the two classes. The cost of this examination has 1-2 cents per acre for field work in 1-2 cents per acre including the cost of telexes for maps and reports.

Saskatchewan Livestock

The total value of farm livestock in Saskatchewan is placed at $112,240,700. Since the year 1904, the number of horses has increased from 240,638 to 1,122,449; milk cows from 112,813 to 454,004; other cows from 44,516 to 1,048,730; all cows from 472,354 to 1,502,734; sheep from 131,339 to 191,827; and swine from 175,514 to 542,643.

Placing the Land Settlers

Helping Agricultural Immigrants to Become Self-sufficient Settlers

The Land Settlement Branch of the Department of the Interior is given the work of helping agricultural immigrants to become self-sufficiently settled on the land. It has an elaborate programme, including advice to immigrants as to where suitable farm land is available, protection against exorbitant prices for the land, finding places for farm laborers, etc.

This is exceedingly important work. If the settlers are to succeed, and if the country is to get the benefit of the money spent on immigration, it is necessary that the new settlers shall have the best possible chance to make good.

But the work is important for another reason. The more successful it is the more immigrants will drift from the land into the cities, possibly to join the ranks of the unemployed. It is therefore to be hoped that the policy will be not only carefully planned, but actually carried out.—Montreal Free Press.

Alberta Seed Grain

Three railroads of seed grain are being shipped weekly from the provincial seed cleaning and marketing plant at Edmonton. So great is the demand that no more registered first and second generation Manitoba wheat is available. About 50,000 bushels of seed grain have been handled by the plant. Last fall and 20,000 bushels more were handled before this year's seeding is completed.

To talk of a hundred million people in Canada may seem fantastic. But unless all things fall, we shall be a much shorter time than was the U.S. and Russia in getting to that point. When a hundred years start of us, there is a remarkable correspondence between our record for last century and ours for this. The American census for 1900 showed 52,000,000, ours for 1901 was 5,271,312; (yours for 1910 was 72,238,841, ours for 1911 was 7,200,444); theirs for 1920 was 93,025,462, ours for 1921 was 9,748,183. If we repeat their experience our population should show double in the next twenty years, and nearly double a second time the following twenty years.

A much more rapid growth than this may, however, be confidently anticipated. Had not the high tide of immigration into Canada up to 1912 been so seriously checked—almost stopped—by the war, our population in 1921 would certainly have been far in advance of that of the United States in 1920. How different, too, the railroad situation! There was not a railway of any kind a century ago and it was several decades later before there was a dream of one crossing the continent. But we have railroads now not only all over the whole parts of the country, but also transcontinental roads of the highest type. In 1858 the United States had less than a quarter of a million people west of the Mississippi River, whereas we have now nearly two millions in our four western provinces. Even as late as 1910 there were only half as many in the American west as in ours now. British Columbia has only the same population as Nova Scotia, though eighteen times as large. If the former were as thickly populated as the latter, it would have 3,000,000 people, as many as in the whole of Canada today.

Though we have no such cities as our neighbor's largest ones, yet we can already see indications of their problem of city congestion beginning to show up. Montreal and Toronto have each five times as many people as New York had in 1870—five tenths of the Americans live in their three largest cities. Already one-fifth of ours are in our two largest. More than a quarter of theirs are in cities of 100,000 or more, of which there are sixty-eight; and one half are in places above 2,500. The increase in the American urban population in the last decade has been 75 per cent. In the rural it has only been three per cent. Whereas in 1910 the rural population was seven million higher than the urban, in 1920 it was four million lower.

We have in Canada an almost equal division between places with more and those with less than five hundred. In the last thirty years three inhabiting places of five hundred or less have increased from 2,094,111 to 4,424,595, or fifty 24 per cent, while the population of larger places has grown from 1,527,025 to 1,248,975, or 183 per cent. Most of our rural gains have been in our western provinces, which show an increase in the last decade from 1,045,626 to 1,529,371, or 47 per cent. While in Ontario this gain has been only 24 per cent, and in Quebec one-half of one per cent. The urban gains in the same period for these last-named provinces had been 243 and 243 per cent respectively.

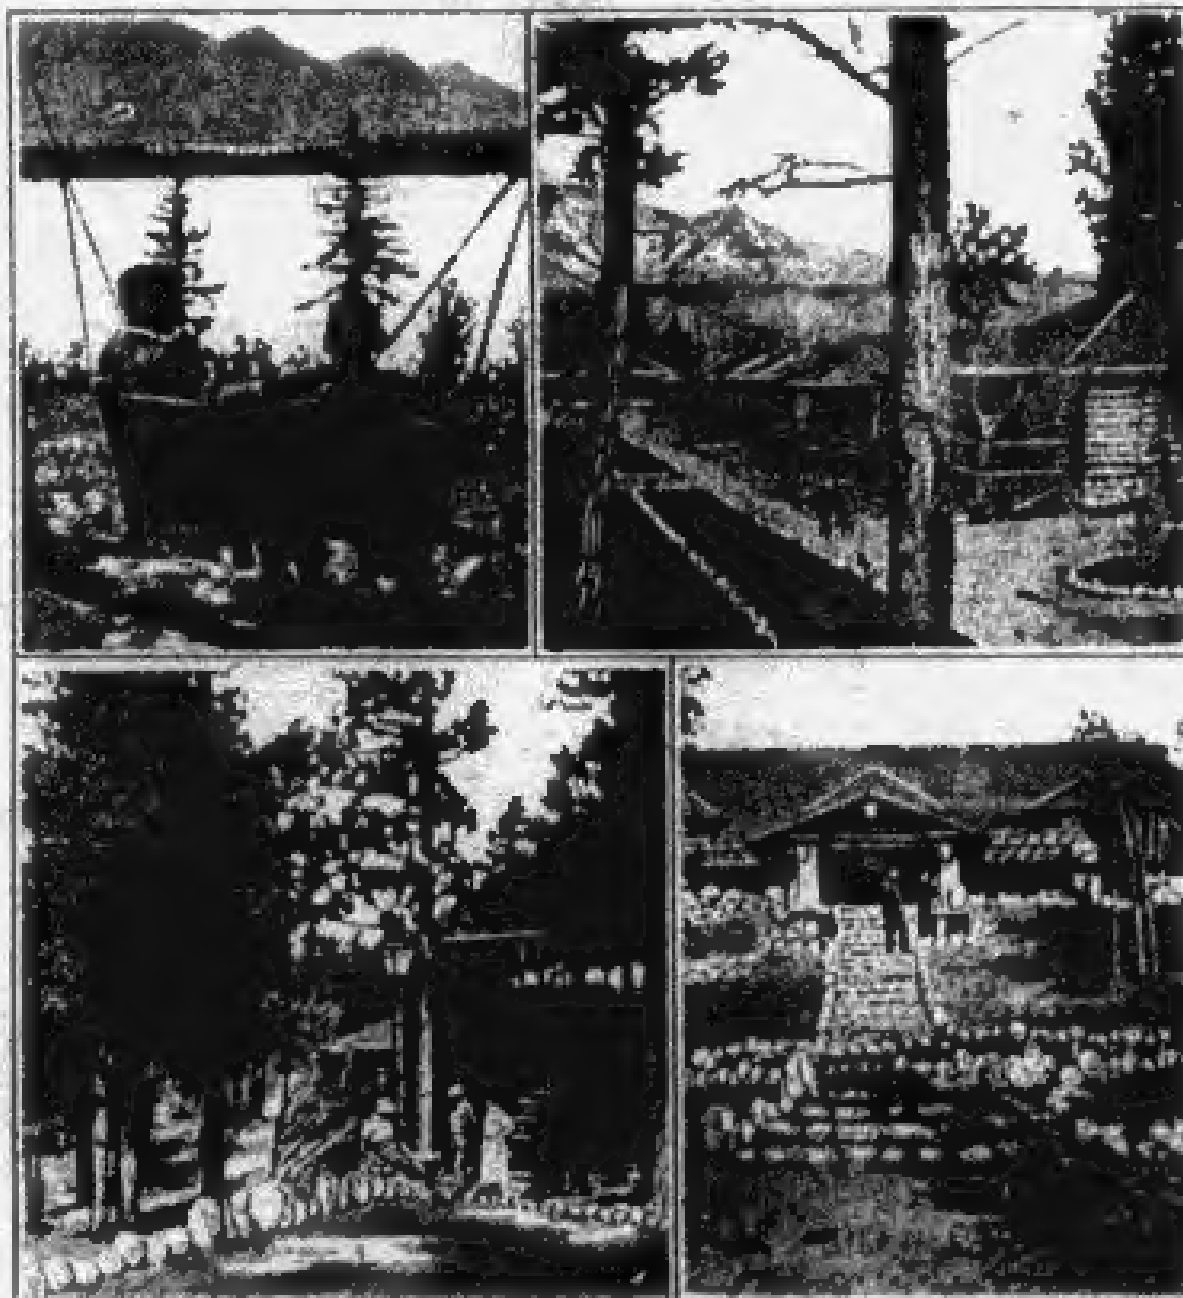

All of the above indicates clearly that we are on the same path of rapid growth which was developed with such intensity across the line last century. But inasmuch as our transportation facilities and other favorable conditions do far transcend those enjoyed by our neighbors at that time, we shall in all likelihood greatly outpace them their wonderful achievement.—Montreal Free Press.

Exports From Western Farms

Percent of the three prairie provinces exports of an aggregate income of $261,000,000 on exports from their farms and ranches in operations during 1921. The farmers of Manitoba received $86,324,000; Saskatchewan, $171,047,000; and Alberta farmers, $223,314,000.

It has been estimated that it would take 100,000 full grown men to give the same strength of light as is received from the sun.

CANADA'S NATIONAL PLAYGROUND

Canadians are fortunate in their National Parks, in that they have within their borders Alpine scenery which is not equalled anywhere in the continent, and more and more they are realizing that holidays in Canada held for the lover of out-of-doors are the thrills that could be found anywhere in the world. Jasper National Park is the Canadian Rockies, can take many high peaks, generally snow-capped, and on the sides of the mountains are glaciers which have stood the test of ages. Millions of acres of ice stretching to some instances almost as far as the eye can see, have the advantage of being in new attempts, while in the case of peaceful valleys and some of all kinds live at peace with mankind and the world.

Additional buildings for the accommodation of guests are to be erected at Jasper Park Lodge, the two-story building at the Canadian National Railway at Jasper National Park, is time for the opening of the 1924 season. It is announced by officials of the Hotel Department, Canadian National Railway. During last season the popularity of Jasper National Park was so great that the capacity of Jasper Park Lodge was taxed, and the additional buildings being provided this year will take care of at least fifty per cent more guests.

Four 4-room bungalows, each room with bath, and two 12-room bungalows, each room also having private bath, are being erected. In addition, a double-deck bus, with the upper floor for passengers and the lower being constructed, and an octagonal tower building is being built near the main lodge. Four new buildings are being erected to serve as employees' quarters, the kitchens are being extended and the main lounge is being extended to provide for a better reception room and for a men's billiard and card room.

"I fully understand and appreciate your point of view," Miss Fraser, "but had we left the horses with them, we would have left the means in their hands to enable them to come in for a share of the money. We would, in any event, have given them a chance to escape due punishment for their crime. In their present straits they are near enough to the Mounted Police line of patrol to enable them to surrender to save their own lives. If Winona had delivered the message we instructed her to do, there will in any event be a detachment in pursuit of them before long. We were fully justified in doing what we did to save your life and perhaps our own. I think that we committed neither a moral offence, nor an offence against the law, in taking their horses and leaving them stranded."

"Did you send word to the Moose Mountain Police detachment? In that case we shall likely meet Sergt. Melvin with a squad of men before we reach home. He is the sergeant in charge there. He is a friend of ours, and I am sure he will start off as soon as he gets word."

The note of enthusiasm in her voice at the thought of Sergt. Melvin coming to her rescue somewhat cooled Ronald's ardor as it conveyed the suggestion of a probable rival. Uncertain as to what he was with respect to his feelings regarding this young woman, the interest she manifested in another man did not prove a pleasing suggestion to him. By a strange degree of fate this adventure had brought this young woman into his life. Her attractive personality so fascinated him that the thought of another man standing between him and her disturbed him not a little. It suggested the conviction that his interest in her was now of deeper significance than a mere passing fancy. The feeling suddenly came over him that Mary Fraser meant more to him than many of his other interests in life. Whatever fate destiny had in store for him the prominence of his heart convinced him that this girl, who passed a lonely life on a prairie ranch, would exercise a strong influence over his future life. His circumstances, as a mere passing stranger who, in the course of a few days at the most, would be

I thank God I did, for it relieved me, many miles away from her, he thought, left a chance of winning her hopeless. For a time he regretted the fate that destined him to leave her behind.

Mary watched him through half-closed eyelids, while those thoughts couraged through his mind, and, noticing his thoughtful mood, she said: "Mr.
MacRae, you must have thought I was very rude to you when I met you on the trail the first time? You see, I was greatly afraid. I thought, after all, that you might be one of the 'horse rustlers,' and I wanted to get away.
You did not look like one, but I was not sure, even though you told me you were a scout. I am glad I did not let you come, for, I am sure, those men would have shot at me if you had."

"Miss Fraser, I did not think that you were rude at all. But, after what you had told me about 'horse rustlers' being in the district, I was afraid that you were running into great danger.
I, even then, would have followed you had you not told me that you would strike for home from the direction you followed. When you did not turn up at home, after a reasonable time had passed, I felt sure then that you were in trouble. But I did not want to alarm your father and mother with fears, that, after all, might be groundless, especially since your father thought that you were all right and would get back before dark."

"I am used to riding alone along the hills. I am never afraid of danger, as it always seemed safe—and this time, I shall not feel so safe after this, but still, horse thieves do not come around here often."

"Your mother," said her father,
"will not allow you to go out riding after this. She was always worried when you were out alone in the evenings, and she will be worse about this."

"Do you think so, father? Mother is reasonable and I am sure she will not worry, if I am careful not to stay out too late."

"Still, Mary, your mother is not always in favor of you riding so much on wild horses over a wild country, where you are in danger of meeting with accidents. You know she disapproves of you going around dressed in men's clothes."

As if conscious for the first time of her unusual attire, with a flushed and ashamed expression on her face, she replied: "You know, father, that I have been acting so long as your chore boy and assistant, that I have become so used to these garments that I wear them, naturally, as a matter of course. It would be very awkward for me to do what I do on the ranch in long skirts, and, besides, I prefer to wear riding breeches and boots when I am out riding; they are so much more comfortable and convenient. Of course, Mr. MacRae, I do not wear these when I am at home with mother. I am then dressed like any other girl."

"Miss Fraser, no matter how unusual your riding habit is, there is one thing about it and, that is, that it cannot conceal the fact that you are a most charming young lady. It cannot do that. Besides, in your circumstances, and your daily routine of work that you have to follow in the open, comfort and utility, as well as becomingness, is the main thing to seek, and not the conventional. I think that your riding habit is both suitable and becoming."

"Oh, thank you, Mr. MacRae, it is nice of you to say that." Then with a pleased expression on her face she arose, and commenced to count the horses to the barn. When she had completed her count, she found that there were only fifteen horses altogether, and she remarked to the men that one of them must have strayed away, or was, perhaps, left behind with the outlaws. They counted the horses after her and confirmed her conclusion. They assumed that, Ronald, in haste in cutting them loose, must have overlooked one of the bandits' horses. That would leave them with one horse between the two of them.

Preparations were now being made to resume their journey homeward.
But before they had their horses resaddled, Mary, in scanning over the prairie, caught sight of a detachment of Mounted Police coming in their direction from the north. They accordingly decided to await their arrival.

In a few minutes they were within hailing distance, and, as Mary signalled them, they approached at a canter. The men in command, whom she cordially greeted as Sergt. Melvin, dismounted as he came up, and taking her hand in both his, shook it cordially, saying: "Why, Mary, I am so pleased to see you safe and sound again. We were afraid that you were in for a bad time of it. We started as soon as we received word at detachment quarters and this morning we struck the fresh trail left in the grass and followed it this far. We did not know what had become of you, but we followed the clue that your father and the other men with him were following in the trail of the horse thieves. How did you escape and what has become of the outlaws?" Then he turned to his men and commanded them to water and feed the horses.

Mary proceeded to tell him the incidents of their adventure, as they unrolled off for a slow walk, during which they watched and exchanged the horses in the band as they passed among them. Ronald, seemingly unconcerned in their movements as they walked about, nevertheless, casually watched them as they continued their story. He noticed that both of them were occasional glances in his direction, which led him to infer that in their conversation they made frequent reference to himself and the part he had taken in her rescue. While the sturdy upright bearing and the personality of the sergeant marked him as a formidable rival to himself, yet, the inference he drew that he was one of the chief targets of their conversation did not displeasure him. He felt that his reputation would not suffer in morbid praise at the hands of the woman who owed her rescue to his skill and achievement.

On rejoining the group, Mary introduced the sergeant to Ronald. As they shook hands both men appreciated each other in momentary silence.
Then Sergt. Melvin said: "It is a pleasure to meet you, Mr. MacRae.
Miss Fraser has just been telling me all about her rescue from the bandits. I congratulate you, young man, upon your good luck, and your good fortune, in accomplishing it so successfully. While we are all glad to have Miss Fraser back, safe and sound and none the worse for her adventures, yet, we envy you the part you took in her escape."

Ronald, though conscious of a certain amount of restraint in the presence of his courteous rival, was from springing and tramping, equal to the occasion, and replying with equal courtesy he said: "Sergt. Melvin, I am also pleased to meet you. It was by more good luck that I was present at the time when Miss Fraser and her parents needed such assistance as I was able to give them. It was a privilege to have been able to do so. It is fortunate that we succeeded without meeting with serious results. The part I played in her rescue was only such as any man would have done under the same circumstances."

He was rewarded for his courtesy by a pleasant smile from the young lady herself. She was interested in their remarks as she listened to their comments. The sergeant then made an appreciation of the horses in their possession and gave Mr. Fraser instructions to hold them till the outlaws should come and claim them. As to the horses belonging to the outlaws, he considered that they were their own legitimate prize. Unless some law-abiding citizen should come along and claim them as his own. The brands on them were of no Canadian registration so far as known to them.
He also warned them to hold themselves in readiness in case they should be called upon to give evidence against the outlaws in case of capture and trial.

After giving the police full details of the location of the bandits' camp, and a description of the men, which Miss Fraser was able to give, very minutely, they got ready for their trip home. Sergt. Melvin monitored Mary's attention during this time, and assisted her in saddling her horse, and making all necessary adjustments. After assisting her into the saddle, he was overheard by Ronald to say that he would be able to see her again the next day, if all went well.
He would then tell them as to his plans at overtaking the outlaws. After Ronald had rounded up the horses and driven them on the trail leading to the north, they were soon on their way, leaving the police behind at the camping place.

During the first few miles of the trip, Ronald was busily occupied in saddling the loose horses on the trail and getting them into a steady pace for the trip. Mr. Fraser and Mary followed leisurely behind. This was a diversion that suited his present mood. In the person of the Mounted Police sergeant he recognized a worthy rival and a formidable rival for the favor of the young woman, who, within so short a time and exciting experiences, had come to mean so much to him in his future happiness.

There were evidences that were unmistakable to him that the sergeant's interest in her was of deeper significance than mere friendship. But, whether or no, this feeling was reciprocated in kind, he could not say.
That she was intimately and cordially friendly with him was quite apparent.
He reasoned that he was the type of man whose personality would in any circle attract the admiration of women and enlist their friendship. But such friendships, he knew, did not always ripen into love. Love in most women he knew was more often referring than demonstrative, and Mary Fraser did not appear to him to belong of the type of woman who would be prone to make an outward showing of her real heart feeling, unless, as he feared, their relationship had gone so far as to be affianced lovers.

In that event, he felt that his aspirations for the heart and love of the young woman with whom he was now beginning to feel deeply in love, were hopeless.

He was thus deeply absorbed in his thoughts and musings, when he was joined by the father and daughter, who then trailed up, one on each side.
As they did so Mary cheerfully shouted: "Mr. MacRae, you are our prisoner. I advise you to ride quietly along between us and make no attempt at escape, for we both shoot straight and sure."

"In that case, Miss Fraser, I submit quietly to arrest. Do you wish me to surrender my arms, and to let your intention to bind my feet to the saddle girth?"

BRITAIN READY FOR LIMITATION OF WAR MACHINES

London. — President Coolidge's speech in New York was very favorably received here both by the press and by the officials of the Labor Government. It is expected the President himself will take the earliest opportunity to proclaim his wholehearted support of the anti-war proposed conference for further world disarmament.

When the time comes for formal invitations to a second world disarmament conference the answer from Great Britain will be forthcoming as readily and as spontaneously as when the first call was issued by President Harding, according to observers in close touch with the MacDonald Government.

The limitation of its armaments would be Great Britain's special interest at such a conference, but it is stated that, when the time is that of the destruction of war machines, Mr. MacDonald will be likely to adopt a ruthless policy and scrap airplanes, submarines, and soldiers in as near the last man and war implement as possible.

The prospect of a disarmament conference and a consequent saving from the heavy costs of armaments and air forces as much as the reparations problem is settled, though some European countries to strive more strenuously to take full advantage of the new road to a final war settlement which was opened by the expert reports, according to British officials. It pointed out here that President MacDonald's prompt decision to abandon the Singapore naval base scheme is an indication of the support that would be given by British Government to plans for further disarmament.

Shortage of Farm Help

Estimated Eight Thousand Men Will Be Needed in Saskatchewan

Regina.—There is about a twenty-five per cent shortage of labor for seeding operations on the farms in Saskatchewan this spring. In other words, approximately 2,500 more men are required if every farmer who is looking for help is to be supplied, it was learned here.

While the Saskatchewan Employment Service Bureau officials were not prepared to admit, others in close touch with the labor situation generally confirmed the information and it was stated that farmers are paying $20 a month and board for experienced help this season. It is estimated that about 4,000 farm hands will be needed for spring work and that approximately 4,500 will be available.

The testing of draught horses has been part of the programme of the larger fairs in the United States, and is said to be an interesting feature.

Would Hit Steamship Lines

Exclusion Bill Would Affect British Ships Bringing Russians to U.S.

Moscow.—If the present immigration bill before the American congress restricting Russia's quota to 200,000 annually, becomes law, a number of British steamship companies specializing in the transportation of Russian settlers to the United States and Canada, will be forced to abandon their business here, it is declared.

The largest of these are the White Star and Canadian Pacific Companies, which have considerable investments in their Russian services. Last year they shipped many thousands of Russian and Ukrainian emigrants to the United States, while they now have on their waiting lists several thousands more, brought from the interior in the belief that the immigration bill would be defeated or modified.

The companies are faced, in the event of the bill's passage, with the task of returning these immigrants to their homes at great expense.

New Refrigerating System

Process For Transportation of Perishable Goods Being Tested

Montreal.—A new refrigerating system which, it is claimed will revolutionize the system now in operation for the transportation of perishable commodities was put through a test here. Carbon dioxide gas is used in place of thousands of pounds of ice and under it a carload of 12,000 pounds of fresh fish sent from Halifax was found after a week to be as fresh as when it left that port.

It is claimed that space, fuel and labor are saved by this new process and it is said that the Department of Marine and Fisheries is arranging for several different tests of the system.

Veterans Launch Protests

Saskatchewan Command Appeals Against Alleged Injustices of Pension Board

Regina.—Appealing to women's organizations, the press and the public for support in their protest against alleged injustices on the part of the Board of Pension Commissioners of Canada, by failing to abide by decisions of appeal boards, the provincial command of the Great War Veterans' Association has published an eight-page booklet to be distributed broadcast over Saskatchewan.

The pamphlet reproduces editorially from leading Saskatchewan newspapers and from eastern publications, all of which attack the attitude of the Pension Board. It cites specific cases of hardship, cases of delay and generally assails the Pension Board for various alleged sins of omission and commission. Ten thousand copies have been run off for distribution and leaders in every walk of life will be supplied with one. Mainly the distribution will be through local secretaries of G.W.V.A. units.

The publication also asks for an "assessment" for soldier settlements, a readjustment of a sliding scale, the basis of the adjustment to be on the basis of the year the settler purchased his land and equipment. The pamphlet is entitled "Shrapnel."

A CLOSER CHECK UPON BANKING IS NOW ADVOCATED

Ottawa, Ont.—Disclosure, made at Toronto by the legislator of the House Bank as to the unwholesome politics of the institution are considered by William Bryson, M.P., and others who recently brought up the question in the House a good and sufficient cause for their resolution. It calls for amendments to the Bank Act calculated to provide a closer check upon the banking institutions and safeguard against further failures.

A system of government inspection will be advocated by a number of the members, with the idea of sending it to the head office. Therefore such a policy has always been opposed when the Bank Act came up for successive revisions, but opinion, while not favoring complete inspection, has changed considerably both in Parliament and official circles. There now seems to be no question that, as suggested in the Bryson resolution recently discussed, a form will be made. In fact, the acceptance of that resolution by the government side is taken to assure, if not government inspection, at least some closer supervision. The exact form of it will be for the committee to recommend.

Stolen Eggs and the Silk Trade

Above—Raising silk in the Flaxway Kingdom. Below—An Empress train leaving silk at Yokohama and a Canadian Pacific silk special passing through the Rockies.

Production of silk dates for late antiquity, and for some the manner of its production was kept secret. Up to the sixth century A.D. all raw silk was imported into Europe from China, but the Byzantine Emperor Justinian induced two monks to travel into China to procure silk worm eggs and though the export of them was punishable by death, these monks succeeded in bringing back a quantity deposited in the hollows of their pilgrim staves.

From Byzantium, silk cultivation spread into Greece and Syria, thence into Spain, and thence successively into Sicily, Naples, Northern Italy and France, being established in Italy in the sixteenth century.

Various determined attempts have been made, principally between the years 1823 and 1830 to establish the silk industry in America, resulting at one time in a not inconsiderable production, but the excessive cost of the labor involved in the rearing of the worms and in the reeling of the raw silk from the cocoons as compared with the trifling cost of such labor in Europe and Asia, has rendered it impossible to produce raw silk at commercial prices on this continent.

Most of the silk imported to America comes from Japan, Italy and China where, also, the humidity of the atmosphere contributes no little to the success of the industry in those countries. The greatest importation is from the Flaxway Kingdom, and this mostly in the raw-silk form as it is reeled from the cocoons.

Silk is valuable, in one consignment of a few hundred bales, hundreds of thousands of dollars are tied up, and for this reason, that no time may be lost in making up the raw material and placing the finished goods upon the market, the product of the little silk worm is given transportation facilities which few other commodities enjoy. The bales of shakas are stored carefully in the vessels which transport them across the Pacific, and in such a manner that they can be speedily and safely discharged upon arrival at the Canadian or American port. No time is lost. Special trains made up of passenger baggage equipment await the arrival of the vessel at H. docks at Vancouver as do the Empress liners of the Canadian Pacific, and even the valuable cargo has been sealed into the cars the train proceeds towards its destination, often making better time than the regular passenger train.

For the reason that the route is more direct, many silk dealers in New York, where much of the silk is destined, consign their shipments via Canada, and during the past few months many interesting time records have been made over Canadian Pacific lines.

On March 23rd, the "Empress of Asia" sailed from Yokohama carrying the largest consignment of silk to be forwarded from the Orient for some time. The silk was specially stored for prompt discharge on arrival at Vancouver, and from the time the steamer docked, until the special train to New York left, there was a lapse of time of only thirteen and one-half minutes per car.

The silk was delivered in New York about midnight April 4th, the through time from Yokohama to New York being 13 days, 8 hours, and 12 minutes, calendar time. This constituted a record run as far as freight traffic is concerned, but passenger traffic is handled as readily by this company, a 21 day Europe to Orient service via St. John, N.B., or the St. Lawrence route being regularly maintained.

HEART WAS SO BAD HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Mrs. G. E. Fitzgerald, 196 Bess St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—"In the Fall of 1921, I was taken ill with my heart, but I did not pay much attention to it. I kept on with my household duties, but seemed to become worse and worse, and finally had to call in a doctor. He said I was all run-down and was a nervous wreck. I had a severe pain in my chest which would move over to my heart and it became so bad I could not lie down, as when I did I had such a smothering feeling I would have to sit up in bed till it passed away.

I tried several remedies, but with no good results. Finally, I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took 7 boxes, and I am now as well as I was 20 years ago, and I am now 65 years old."

Latest Find in Jerusalem

Recent Discovery Adds 500 Years to City's Age

A further discovery carrying the history of Jerusalem 500 years further than hitherto known is reported in the London Daily Telegraph by Prof. Stewart MacAlister, who recently traced the earliest city of David. This latest find in the excavation of the city shows a great trench about 100 feet deep and apparently formed a part of the city's defences in the early period.

On the surface of the trench, which is eight feet deep and eleven feet wide there is a series of broken steps now cleared for the first time of the rubbish which encumbered them from before the time of Abraham.

Professor MacAlister also reports finding at the top of the trench what he believes to be a Jebusite or pre-Jebusite sanctuary, and he described it as by far the oldest known "Holy place" in Jerusalem.

Huge Timber Deal Pending

A timber deal, involving an immediate cost of approximately $1,250,000, is now being negotiated by the Canadian Robert Dollar Company in the Bayview district on Vancouver Island. The Bayview project affects a stand of timber estimated to contain 300,000,000 feet of lumber and has billions of feet tributary to it. There is enough timber in the tract now under negotiations to provide the company with a dollar's worth of logs for fifteen or twenty-one years.

The Blind in Canada

Out of 2,000 in Ontario 500 Live in Toronto

Capt. A. E. Baker, general secretary of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, who lost his own sight in action in France in 1914, was the guest of honor at a recent meeting of the Kiwanis Club, London, Ont. Capt. Baker gave statistics showing that the amount raised and expended for the benefit of the blind and for the prevention of blindness in Canada has risen from $40,000 in 1915 to approximately $400,000 in 1924, and the objective for 1930 is a million dollars. There are 1,000 blind persons in Canada, half of whom could have been spared this misfortune, he said. Of the 1,000 blind persons in Ontario, 500 are residents of Toronto.

Delaying Tactics

Stopping the People of the West Over Hudson Bay Route

As the time goes on it becomes apparent that the present government is playing the same game with the Hudson Bay railway that its predecessors played. The line is being used to "string the farmers" at the west. There is no one spending more money on the existing portion of this railway unless it is the intention to complete the line and open it to operation; and if it is the intention to complete and operate the line, what is the name of common sense is the use of another board to inquire into the navigability of the Sirinlet.

The navigability of the Sirinlet was determined two hundred and fifty years ago—and has been redetermined many times since. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Borden and Arthur Meighen and even the present government declared that the road should be built they all accepted the feasibility of the route as established. The proposal to create another board of inquiry into this question is nothing more or less than a stall.—Regina Leader.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE ASSYRIAN EXILE OF ISRAEL

Golden Text: "I will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word." Psalm 119:16.

Lesson: 2 Kings, Chapters 17 to 19. Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:16-24.

The Text Explained and Illustrated I. A Recapitulation of the Reasons for the Downfall of Israel, verses 1-12. Here we have, according to Dr. Macdougall, "a good modern inquiry into the causes that led to the destruction of Israel." The historian makes no mention of the overwhelming force of the great Assyrian army, but emphasizes the moral and spiritual causes that led to the destruction of Israel. "It was so because the Children of Israel had sinned against their God." Their first great sin was ingratitude (verse 7). Israel owed its very existence to Jehovah, who had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh, King of Egypt; but instead of being loyal to him they had followed other gods and the laws of the heathen nations about them. Compare the first commandment: "I am Jehovah thy God who brought thee out of the land of Egypt: out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me." And the children of Israel did secretly things that were not right against Jehovah, their God. "The Israelites cooked or covered their idolatry with pretences that it was a worship of Jehovah, so glossing it over and dissembling towards God, instead of openly acknowledging their apostasy." Other sins are enumerated. They built high places for idolatrous practices from the tower of the lonely watchman who guarded his flocks to the fortified city; wherever, that is, there was a handful of people. Upon every high hill and under every green tree they set themselves up pillars and Asherim. The pillars were stone columns erected beside altars as symbols of the deity worshipped there, relics of the old stone worship; the Asherim, were wooden columns, or sacred trees, symbols of the goddess of Asherah, a survival of the ancient tree worship. They burnt incense in all the high places as did the nations whom Jehovah carried away before them. Some of these objects were erected in honor of Jehovah, but the worship was corrupt, being associated with the evil practices of the old Canaanite worship. They are, moreover, expressly charged with serving Moloch, whoredom Jehovah had said unto them (De. 12:31). Ye shall not do this thing. "What a tragedy yet to be conquered by his spirit! What stupidity—to dispossess a heathen nation, and yet to adopt the heathen faith! What ingratitude—to win success by God's mercy and then to despise the Giver! Yet it has often happened so. How many men have risen above the circumstances of poverty, and have been debased by the circumstances of wealth! How many have conquered hardship and pain, and been overcome by pride and hardness of heart! Every situation we come into has its false gods, its wrong spirit. Only he who gave us power to win a position can give us grace to live in it. Only the humility and reverence that made us strong in struggle can keep us safe in triumph" (James Reid).

Canned "Desserts"

How to Prepare for the Next Old Southern Style

The southern housewife is the one who knows how to prepare sweet potatoes as beautifully golden brown and so deliciously cooked that they fairly melt in your mouth.

Here is the way to cook them: Boil three or four medium-sized potatoes; peel and slice them and place the slices in an enameled ware baking dish. In a saucepan put half a cup of water, a cup of brown sugar and two tablespoons of butter and cook this mixture until it forms a thick syrup. Add barely a pinch of salt and pour this over the sliced potatoes in the baking-dish. Cover and put in a moderate oven for fifteen minutes; then take off the cover and bake a few minutes longer to brown the potatoes on top. Serve from the enameled ware baking dish, which is sturdy enough for the kitchen and attractive enough for the dining-room.

Burglars at Stony.

Some time during the early hours of Sunday morning the safe in the office of Armistaster & Henning on Main street was forced open. The probable objective of the burglars was to secure a sum of $1420 which had been in the safe up to Friday morning, when it was transferred to the local bank. The money belonged to an estate for which Mr. Armistaster was a trustee.

The job was done by some one who had a fairly good idea of the local layout, as the C. N. section road house door was forced open and a steel crowbar taken; the engine room of the Armistaster mill was entered and a six pound sledge taken; both these implements being found in the office afterwards.

The officers were fortunate in making a good getaway, as the outrage was not discovered till late Sunday afternoon, when Mr. McCulla was passing the office on his way home and noticed the door open. The office had been entered by breaking the glass along the lock and undoing the latch.

Constable Pattie was on the job immediately and commenced an investigation.

Headquarters was notified and a posse headed by Detective Leslie was sent in short order.

The burglars were very careful to avoid leaving tell tale marks behind, as they evidently were wearing gloves while operating on the safe.
